

Why Employee Training matters?

Lack of qualified workers in the past few years

2.1
Million

Manufacturing jobs that will go unfilled by 2030

95%

Employees who would stay on if their company offered learning and development

88%

Gen Z'ers who say it's important for an employer to provide training

45%

Companies that have turned down business due to lack of workers

MyTraining from Emerson

Next-level knowledge for the manufacturing workforce

- Keep pace with evolving technologies
- Develop a capable workforce
- Optimize performance and improve safety
- Highly flexible to meet the needs of both company and workforce

You choose when, where and how to learn

- Online at your own pace
- On-site at an Emerson office or at your facility
- Customized to address your specific needs
- Virtual led by a live instructor online

Variety of delivery methods for maximum flexibility

- Standard: Out-of-the-box training courses that covers configuration, implementation, IT-related and hardware resources
- Role-based Training: Learning paths for various job roles, such as technicians, planners and plant managers
- Customized Courses: Topics tailored to the customer's requirements

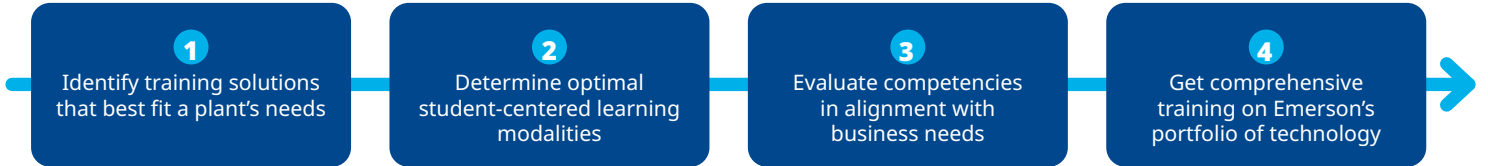

Founded on rigorous IACET (International Accreditation for Continuing Education and Training) practices and policies.

Training centers can be found across the world. Find your closest here.

Why Employee Training matters?

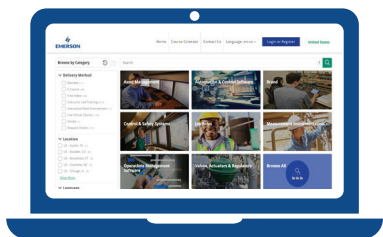

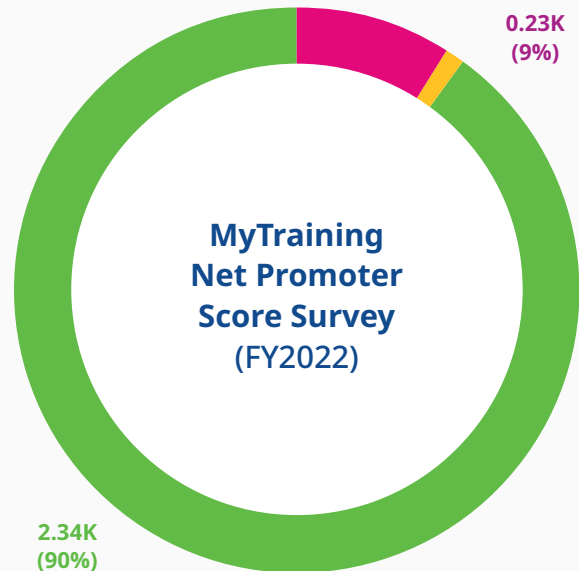

MyTraining Survey Result

"My instructor was knowledgeable and engaged me in learning knowledge, skills and abilities."

"The instructor was very knowledgeable and had an answer to every question. She kept the pace up the entire training and was engaged with everyone to ensure no one fell back. She had lots of tricks that the curriculum didn't cover and was able to give real world examples as to how/where we may run into certain issues and how to work through them."

"The course was well taught and well run. Use of the virtual machines was very good, and the practicals were well managed and lead out well."

LEVEL-UP

MyTraining Online Platform

A component of the MyEmerson personalized digital experience, MyTraining provides a central location for easy accessibility including:

- Register for courses
- Search for classes
- View training history

To learn more about MyTraining, click here